The Soule Duels at Madrid. M. Gaillardet writes from Paris to the Courrier des Etats Unis, the French paper in New York, a detailed statement of the unfortunate quarrel which Mr. Soule, our Ambassador to Madrid, and his son had with the French Minister at the same Court, and the Duke of Alba, a near relative to the French Empress. M. Gaillardet's feelings are not on the sideor Mr. Soule, but his account sufficiently establishes the fact that the provocation came from the other side. The history of the quarrel seems to have commence 1 even before Mr. Soule reached Madrid. From the time of the reception of Mr. Soule, as an America n Minister, began to be agitated, M. de Turgot, the

Of the subsequent duel between the elder Soule and the French Minister, the following account is given, which is the first knowledge we have of the immediate origin of this affair : Mr. Soule, Sen., however, considered it proper for him to represent to M. de Turgot that his wife had been insulted in his (the Ambassador's) salons, on an occasion upon which the Duke of Alba was the most honored guest, and the person from whom the insu't came; that the affair had forced the sword into his son's hand; that he had been informed M. de Turgot was the instigator of the insulting remark; and, con sequently, as M. de Turgot had not discharged his In the Cincinnati Commercial of Saturday last we duty, as a host, in exonerating himself from any its occurrence at his fete Mr. Soule persisted in his "When Mr. Watt, engineer of the mail train, demand for reparation, when the French Ambassador

Mr. Soule replied that the change of arrangements was inconvenient, but he did not wish to forego the satisfaction which was his right, and therefore vielded.

The meeting was then fixed for 12 M., the next switched off into the double track, as lightning from rose. Mr. Soule's seconds demanded, in his name, to the city whose spires might now have been seen Marquis de Turgot demurred, and proposed a distance was none to see, for rider, or driver, or living hu- Mr. Soule, "what you call replying to me at the pisman soul had the engine none.
